Kyrgyzstan, with a total population of 6.1 million people, ranks at 120 among 180 countries on human development indicators and has about 1 in 3 people living under the poverty line. The country experiences more than 200 small-to-medium level disasters annually, including flash floods, mudflows, landslides and earthquakes. In addition to natural disasters, Kyrgyzstan faces other challenges in the sectors of employment, economic development, public health care, education, social care, and other areas.

In this context, the Red Crescent Society of Kyrgyzstan (RCSK) plays an important role in delivering essential services to the most vulnerable population of Kyrgyzstan. The National Society's programmes in emergency response and preparedness, public health and social care complement the government's and other actors' efforts. Established in 1926, the RCSK is the largest local humanitarian organization in the country with over 200 staff and 2,600 active volunteers across Kyrgyzstan.

The organization has been optimizing its service delivery during emergencies and through development programmes by integrating progressive approaches into its systems. As such, the RCSK has been utilizing cash-based assistance in its emergency response and early recovery operations. The National Society has been also introducing similar modalities in its developing programming in the areas of health and social care.

Since 2017, with support of the Swiss Red Cross, the RCSK has initiated the mainstreaming process of cash-based assistance across its systems and programmes. The ongoing initiative is built around the following goal and outcomes:
Impact

Improved CTP preparedness and operational readiness of RCSK to deliver quality response to vulnerable and crisis-affected people in Kyrgyzstan

Outcome 1
Institutionalization and standardization at RCSK of streamlined CTP mechanism and procedures

---

Outcome 2
RCSK is effectively applying CTP tools across its programmes and enhancing CTP expertise at all levels

---

Outcome 3
RCSK actively contributes to coordination and communication with stakeholders and beneficiaries for more effective CTP

---

The main activities include:

1. Enabling Systems
   - Involvement of RCSK leadership and technical experts
   - Conducting planning workshop including self-assessment of current status to define gaps and way forward
   - Establish a Plan of Action and roadmap for the project implementation
   - Integration of approved procedures into existing strategic documents including contingency planning and response plans and standard reporting formats

2. Programme tools
   - Development of CTP policy and SOP’s including stress-test, modifications are applied where necessary
   - Application of CTP tools across RCSK programmes (emergency and development)
   - Development, updating and translating FAQ’s fostering timely and relevant communication and messaging to beneficiaries and other stakeholders
   - Database management: centralized online database is established
   - Testing of process and tools with involvement of stakeholders, real-time simulation exercise
   - Development of Mini Pilot projects in DM, Social and Health department

3. Capacity and resources
   - Develop and conduct context specific trainings and refresher for RCSK leadership, staff and volunteers (CTP, RAM etc.)
   - Peer-to-peer support, exchange visits and application of lessons learned
   - Resource mobilisation options for CTP implementation are assessed

4. Communication and Coordination
   - Raising and promoting the profile of RCSK to be the partner of choice for stakeholder in CTP implementation
   - Training of RCSK staff on CEA
   - Development of communication materials (reports, videos, pictures, stories etc.)
   - Conduction of evaluation and lessons learned workshop

Building on the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement’s guidelines for mainstreaming and preparedness, the mainstreaming process has been organized along four parallel tracks, each of which contributes to the operational readiness.
Achievements

The RCSK recognizes the cash-based initiatives as an effective way to support people affected by emergencies and other humanitarian challenges, which serves as a tool to maintain dignity and choice of people, while fostering local economies as well as promoting the localization agenda. Guided by the IFRC Cash Strategic Framework and Roadmap, the RCSK has undertaken several steps to mainstream its relevant systems and procedures in order to improve its effectiveness to deliver quality programming to vulnerable people in Kyrgyzstan. The following has been achieved by the National Society in the mainstreaming process:

RCSK CBI Policy developed and approved

Several modalities tested, in different sectors (health, disaster management and social care):
- Commodity vouchers
- Cash in envelopes
- Banking cards

Human resources development:
- RCSK staff (2) trained in PECT
- RCSK staff (4) trained in CALP-2
- RCSK all regional directors (7), Heads of Departments (4), key staff (10) sensitized on CBIs and mainstreaming processes
- RCSK NDRT volunteers (over 60) received basic training on CBIs
- Context-based CTP training (2-day) developed

Over the past three years, the following RCSK initiatives utilized CBA tools and reached 4,360 beneficiary families (or around over 17,000 people) across Kyrgyzstan.
